

Year-Round Uses for Your Art Panel

Its form is simple enough: a handcrafted polycarbonate sheet, held in place by durable composite material and framed by robust cedar. Its functions, however, are infinite. Below are just a few ways you can use your Art Panel, rain or shine.

Shave Time

The best part about using shaving cream to decorate your Art Panel, aside from the easy cleanup, is that it's perfect for all ages and skill-levels: Just put some shaving cream on the Art Panel, and off you go!

Waterways

Sometimes, it can be tricky to find activities for children to do during colder months. While you may not be able to paint when it's icy out, you can use a spray-bottle to spray water onto the art panel and observe the patterns it makes as it freezes and crystalizes. To make it even more interesting, add food coloring to the water.

All Kinds of Colors

One of the most common ways children use the Art Panel is by filling the space up with every color imaginable. From landscapes to abstract shapes, everyone is able to express themselves in every hue by using safe Earth-friendly paints that can be easily rinsed off.

A Collage of Nature

Even though the panel is two-dimensional, your art doesn't have to be. Has it rained recently? Gently stick some mud, leaves, twigs, and other natural materials to your panel to create a tactile, three-dimensional piece of art. As long as you've got a natural adhesive handy, you're ready to get started.

No matter the season, temperature, or time, your Art Panel is a fantastic resource for your outdoor classroom. If you use your Art Panel in a way that isn't listed here, we want to hear about it! Visit our Facebook page and share any photos or tips you have.
